

THIRTY-FOURTH INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON ECONOMIC CRIME

SUNDAY 4th SEPTEMBER - SUNDAY 11th SEPTEMBER 2016

JESUS COLLEGE, UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Economic Crime – where does the buck stop?
Who is responsible - facilitators, controllers and or their advisers?

The 34th Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime

Economic Crime – where does the buck stop? Who is responsible - facilitators, controllers and or their advisers?

The thirty-fourth international symposium on economic crime has the most ambitious programme both in terms of objective and content that we have so far attempted. This year we seek, as our overarching objective, to address perhaps the most significant question in any system – simply put, where should the ‘buck stop’ - for committing or facilitating misconduct, that undermines stability, security and development? Who should society, through its various systems whether of law, compliance or public criticism, blame for crimes perpetrated against, through or with our financial and business structures? This is not just an issue of confidence or doing the right thing, but reinforcing integrity without which our systems and markets will suffer. There is also the issue of whether we, in seeking to impose fines and other forms of condemnation on those who have simply ‘permitted’ misconduct to occur, disproportionately penalise and indirectly harm those who we should be protecting. The recent financial crisis, compounded by the increased use of financial sanctions, together with our near obsession with attempting to inhibit money laundering and create financial intelligence, have arguably created unsustainable risks for those who in the ordinary course of their business mind other people’s wealth and for those who advise them.

As in previous symposia we do not, however, focus on a single – no matter how important, issue. This year over 600 specialists, most with topical and practical experience, will address in plenary sessions, workshops and think tanks as many issues pertaining to the real concerns of those at the ‘coal face’ and their managers, that have been brought to our attention. Just spend a few minutes to look through the 34th Symposium programme, I am confident that you will be impressed by its depth, breadth and relevance. The symposium is not a mere talking shop - it was conceived to fulfil a very practical purpose. To promote understanding of the real issues in controlling economically motivated crime and facilitate co-operation and effective action – ideally preventive. The symposium is supported by a number of governments and their agencies, with some of the world’s leading universities, research organisations, the professions and, of course, those in the financial and business sectors, from around the world. As in previous years we expect well over 1,600 participants from nearly 100 different countries. The opportunities for networking and developing meaningful co-operation are unique.

The annual symposium over the last thirty-four years has brought together in one of the oldest medieval Colleges of the University of Cambridge, ministers, legislators, senior officials, diplomats, judges, regulators, law enforcement, intelligence and security officers, financial intermediaries, bankers, professional advisers, compliance and risk officers and researchers from around the world.

This programme is structured to provide a depth and breadth of opportunity - second to none, for those participating in the symposium to become aware not only of existing, but also new threats, and how best to address them. Through the numerous plenary and other workshops and in particular the considerable opportunities to meet colleagues socially, there is a degree of interaction and collaboration that could only be encountered in an institution that has the highest world reputation for learning and research. The University of Cambridge, collaborating with a host of distinguished institutions throughout the world, offers a wholly different experience than any other forum in addressing these fundamentally important issues. It is for this reason that the symposium can attract the support and participation that it does – over so many years.

The Cambridge Symposium is not and has never been just a conference. It is organised on a non-profit making basis by some of the world’s most respected academic and research institutions with the active involvement and support of numerous governmental and inter-governmental organisations. It was established to promote meaningful international co-operation – in the fight against financial crime. Its record is its best testimonial. Successive symposia have made a real contribution – at all levels, to promoting stability, good governance and the disruption and control of serious crime and terror. Those who are concerned to protect and promote the integrity and wellbeing of their national economy, institution or enterprise – or who are concerned to better understand the risks facing business today, cannot afford to miss this very special event.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Jesus College, Cambridge and the University of Cambridge

Jesus College was founded as a college, within the University of Cambridge, in 1496 by Bishop Alcock of Ely. The history of the College is, however, rather more ancient. An order of nuns occupied the site and buildings for at least two hundred and fifty years before this. Since the inception of the annual Cambridge Symposium, thirty-four years ago by Professor Barry Rider, the Master and Fellows of the College have been pleased to host the event and the College administers all financial matters pertaining to the programme.

The earliest record of the University of Cambridge is in 1209 so the University has recently celebrated its 800th anniversary. The University, consisting of over 100 departments, faculties and schools, is rated as the world's foremost research university. A number of the University's centres and programmes are involved in supporting the annual Cambridge Symposium on Economic Crime.

Its library is the national law library and the Institute's research staff are concerned with promoting and conducting research across a broad spectrum of legal and related issues.

National Crime Agency

The NCA leads, supports and co-ordinates the response against serious and organised crime affecting the UK with a national and international reach and the mandate and powers to work in partnership with other law enforcement organisations. It incorporates a number of commands including the Economic Crime Command and the National Cyber Crime Unit. The commands are supported by a central Intelligence Hub. The Economic Crime Command is tasked with leading and co-ordinating the response to economic crime affecting the U.K., including amongst others: fraud; cyber-enabled fraud; bribery and corruption; intellectual property crime and market abuse.

City of London Police

The City of London's Police are entrusted as the National Lead Force for fraud on behalf of the UK Police Service. They lead the police service fight against fraud and economic crime.
